The Flower Shop

Rita the Fox has a lot to do in the flower shop. Nedo the Bear helps her, but by mistake, he gives the daisy the super-grow potion. The flower starts growing and doesn't stop. What a mess! What now? They need to cut it, or it will break the roof! Gino the Cat has an idea: they will plant it in the park. Done and done! It is finally time to celebrate!

The Hen Bakery

Amanda the Hen has just baked the cake for the ducklings' party. But who knew it was for the party? Not Grandma Frog, who eats a slice. And Gino Cat eats one too, and Rita and Nedo and Giò... Slice by slice, the cake is gone! And now? A new cake needs to be baked. With everyone's help, it will be ready in time. Happy birthday, ducklings!

School in the Woods

GIUDITTA CAMPELLO
Illustrated by ARIANNA CICCIO

During one of her flights, Tit lands in the city and sees something very interesting: a school! Upon her return, she tells everything to her friends, and Squirrel has an idea: they will also have a school in the woods. Everyone agrees and gets ready: Tit will teach singing, Squirrel gymnastics, Hedgehog drawing, and Hare poetry. They furnish the classroom in an old tree stump and Squirrel rings the bell. It begins!

But something is missing: the students! Tit has an idea: they will take turns being the students. Soon the animals passing by also approach and sit at the desks. The school in the woods is now full of students!

Petrarch tells the Canzoniere

DANIELE ARISTARCO
Illustrated by GLENDA SBURELIN

Six and a half centuries have passed since Petrarch's death, yet his Canzoniere still teaches us to express the most important of human emotions: love, in all its passionate contradictions.

A marvellous illustrated picture book that retraces the poetic journey of one of Italy's greatest poets, Francesco Petrarch, through the words of Daniele Aristarco: an ideal reading for the 650th anniversary of the death of the great Tuscan poet.

Where is my Fur?

ALESSANDRO MONTAGNANA

highlight

Lupetto is lively and sprightly, he loves butterflies, flowers, and jumping everywhere. He adores his mom's cakes, but there's one thing he absolutely detests: taking a bath and washing his paws before eating... Only his mom's cake can convince him to take a bath! So, after washing his fur, Lupetto hangs it to dry on a branch and falls asleep. When he wakes up, it's gone! What could have happened?

A book for everybody, for nature lovers and those who cherish the joy of discovery.

A story accompanied by rich illustrations, to learn to look at the world with curiosity and imagination.

Chiara lives in the countryside, in her parents' farm. Her mother wakes her up waving a stick of incense in the air, her father plays the guitar, dances, sings, and drives the tractor, and her little brother talks to the hen Olga. Chiara practices archery and sometimes wishes she could shoot them all. She grows up grumbling, but through the guests at the farm, she sees the world, which isn't so bad after all. One day, three boys arrive at the farm. They settle in the Hobbit House, Chiara's favorite. Chiara is thrilled. Finally, she'll have company! But nothing will be as she imagines. Good and evil will indeed intrude into her life, striking her like one of the arrows she loves so much.

A story that addresses current themes with great sensitivity, depicting the intimate wounds caused by violence.

At the right Distance

LUCA COGNOLATO, SILVIA DEL FRANCIA
Cover by IACOPO BRUNO

Robert Capa, the famous war photographer, lands in Africa with the Allies fighting Hitler. In search of the perfect photograph, he gets closer and closer to the action: parachuting into Sicily, advancing through Italy, landing in Normandy, and entering Paris. However, upon entering the gates of concentration camps, he realizes that getting too close might trivialize those places, and that to capture a good photo, it's necessary to maintain the right distance.

Robert Capa's photographic eye seeks to tell the story of war, focusing on the suffering of survivors, showing the horror on children's faces, all while striving to maintain the right distance.

A book for photography enthusiasts and those interested in stories of love, as well as anyone wanting to learn more about World War II.
